

Wine and Spirits Business Recruitment at Burgundy School of Business

The School of Wine & Spirits Business of Burgundy School of Business, in Dijon, France, is looking to recruit more staff from September 2021. There are two posts available. A brief, informal, outline of the positions is below, but further information and/or full details about the posts can be had from one of our contacts, either Nikos Georgantzis nikolaos.georgantzis@bsb-education.com or Steve Charters steve.charters@bsb-education.com. What follows is a brief outline of the roles but if anyone is interested they are advised to talk to one of us and, if they then want to take it further, to follow up with a discussion with the Head of School.

For both positions good written and spoken English is essential (most of our courses are taught in English). French is helpful but not essential, and support and teaching will be available to any non-French speaking person who is appointed. A willingness to focus on wine and/or spirits is also a given!

Research-Teacher in Wine and Spirits Business

This is a senior position for an academic from one of the business disciplines to carry out research and to teach.

We are a small but dynamic, multicultural research team who work very cooperatively, and this would suit someone who enjoys working with others. The teaching load is to be determined, depending on overall responsibilities, but will be designed to suit an active researcher.

A background in any discipline will be welcomed, but applications from those with experience of general Management, Strategy, Hospitality or Distribution will especially welcome, as will those from academics who have done work specifically in the field of spirits. Experience in the wine and spirits is not essential, but a willingness to focus on the field is.

Research Assistant/Post Doctoral Researcher

There is a post for a Research Assistant. This is designed either for a PhD student who is looking for some employment in the field whilst they complete their thesis, or for a Post-Doc. The responsibilities will include assisting our researchers on their projects (especially one funded by the European Union) and a level of teaching, to be determined.

It is expected that the successful applicant will have some experience in the field of wine or spirits (or possibly more broadly food) and be willing to concentrate on this area in their work. As we are a School of Business and anticipate that the applicants will submit/have a doctorate in one of these, but we would be willing to consider other disciplines if they were relevant to our focus.